Four faces of a family
Four screams for life
A secret behind four windows

They want to get away from each other, but they clasp each other even more firmly. They seek to save appearances at all force. The more they laugh, the quieter it gets around them. The cracks in the family picture widen until an inescapable secret reveals itself.

Christian Moris Müller describes human beings who are on the search for something they lost, hardly noticeable to themselves. He comes very close to them through images of unusual clarity and power. And yet this compelling way of storytelling drives shivers down the spine.

Four windows, this means four stories about four faces who look in different directions. Yet they share the hope not to be alone for a moment.
